

ALEXANDRIA.

SATURDAY EVENING, APRIL 7, 1866.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

Radicalism had its triumph in both Houses of Congress yesterday, as will be seen by the following proceedings:

In the Senate Mr. Lane, of Kansas, offered a joint resolution for the admission of the States lately in rebellion to representation in Congress on condition of their repudiating the rebel debt, endorsing the federal debt, annulling all ordinances of secession, and granting the right of suffrage to such colored people as can read the constitution of the United States and write their names, or who own and pay taxes on two hundred and fifty dollars worth of property.

Mr. Brown asked what assurance had the Senator from Kansas that the President would sign such a resolution?

Mr. Lane said he had no assurance on that or any other subject from the President; but this he did know; that the republican party, of which he was a member, was crumbling to pieces, and every day that the admission of these Southern representatives was delayed insured the destruction of that party. He did know that if this resolution was passed, and the President did sign it, it would bring the republican party and President together in harmony. The Senator from Ohio (Mr. Wade) had assailed the President yesterday as a despot. He repelled all such charges. If the Senator from Ohio had occupied the President's position, he would venture to say that he (Mr. W.) could not have failed to veto that bill. So far as he (Mr. Lane) was concerned, he proposed to day and hereafter to be on the side of the President of the republican party, and to defend him from all assaults.

Mr. Wade replied to Mr. Lane. He said that he had no retraction to make in his speech of yesterday; that he knew what the President was; he was no better than any of them, and his opinion was entitled to no more weight. He was an accidental President, and now all must bow the knee to him, or be denounced. The President had set up civil governments in States which he asserted were not and never had been out of the Union, and if his own theory was correct, he (the President) was the boldest usurper ever set up. During his remarks, Mr. Wade charged Mr. Lane with wearing a collar.

Mr. Lane replied, and said he had expressed his intention of upholding and supporting the President so long as he stood by the principles of the constitution, and for this the Senator from Ohio said he (Mr. L.) wore a collar. That insinuation was unworthy of any Senator, and he flung it back in the teeth of the Senator from Ohio. Mr. Wade said he thought as I did against a pro-slavery Executive and a pro-slavery Congress. The gallant fight made by the Senator from Ohio here would have been of no account, if it had not been for the fight made under my lead on the plains of Kansas. Indicted by a pro-slavery party for treason and $100,000 offered for my head—Jim Lane wear a collar! Sir, the charge, wherever it is heard, will be denounced as false by both friend and foe.

Mr. Lane then continued in advocacy of the resolutions offered by him, and expressed the opinion that they would meet the approval of the President.

Mr. Brown replied to some of the remarks of Mr. Lane, and said he would vote for the admission of none of these States.

Mr. Doolittle here took the floor and discussed the different plans of reconstruction. The plan of President Johnson was identically the same as that adopted by President Lincoln, and which had the approval of his entire cabinet, including the president Chief Justice.

Mr. Sumner said that the Chief Justice had written a letter to Mr. Lincoln, which he received the day before his death, and in which this statement was set forth.

Mr. Doolittle said he had not been aware of any statement to the contrary. The plan of Mr. Lincoln had received the sanction of this republican Senate this March a year ago. When Mr. Johnson came into office he found this plan in progress, and endeavored to carry it out. Everything was moving smoothly, when gentlemen step in and assume to obstruct it, in the name of the great Union party.

The course of the President was sustained at length by Mr. D. He said he had received a telegram, which he had no doubt was correct, although he had not received the resolution, that the Legislature of Wisconsin had instructed him to vote for this bill, but he had stated the objections to it as viewed from his standpoint, and he could not do it. He knew what the general result of disregarding instructions was. It may end his political life. So be it. Mr. President, this is the only political office I ever held, and I have no wish to hold it one hour longer than I can act according to my own conscience and the dictates of duty.

Mr. Davis addressed the Senate in opposition to the bill.

Mr. Saulsbury said he was convinced now, more than ever, that war was disunion. He, and those with whom he acted had been charged as disunionists by others, and he now lived to see the day when those who had charged this against him were not only disunionists, but revolutionists, and the bleeding, mangled body of the constitution lay in their pathway. In his judgment the pressure of this act was the inauguration of revolution.

Mr. McMillan said the bill was fraught with the most mischievous consequences.

The Chair then put the question—Shall the bill pass, the President's objections to the contrary notwithstanding?—which resulted as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Anthony, Brown, Chandler, Clark, Conness, Granger, Cresswell, Edmunds, Fessenden, Foster, Grimes, Harris, Henderson, Howard, Howe, Kirkwood, Lane of Indiana, Morgan, Morrill, Nye, Poland, Pomeroy, Ramsey, Sherman, Sprague, Stewart, Sumner, Trumbull, Wade, Wiley, Williams, Wilson and Yates—33.

Nays—Messrs. Buckalew, Cowan, Davis, Doolittle, Guthrie, Hendricks, Johnson, Lane of Kansas, McDougall, Ne-nith, Norton, Riddle, Saulsbury, Van Winkle and Wright—15.

When Mr. Morgan's name was called, and he voted yes, a perfect storm of applause rose from the galleries, and many on the floor shook him warmly by the hand.

The Chair announced that the bill, having the requisite constitutional majority of two-thirds, had passed the Senate.

Immediately upon the announcement of the result the applause was renewed in the galleries, and cheers and hurrahs were uttered, and it was some time before order could be restored.

On motion of Mr. Trumbull, it was resolved that the Secretary of the Senate communicate to the House of Representatives the civil rights bill, with the message of the President returning it with his objections, and the action of the Senate thereon.

The Senate then, at 15 minutes to seven, adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Several private bills were reported. The House then took up, as the unfinished business of yesterday, the contested election case of Dodge vs. Brooks, of the 8th New York district.

Mr. Brooks, of New York, took the floor, and concluded the remarks which he commenced yesterday.

Mr. Dawes, chairman of the committee on elections, closed the debate, and reviewed at length the details of the case.

The House then proceeded to vote on the case. The first vote was taken on the motion to recommit the case to the committee on elections, to allow both parties to take additional evidence. This was lost—yeas 53, nays 80.

The next vote was on the resolution of the minority report of the committee, that William E. Dodge is not entitled to a seat in this House from the eighth district of New York. This was lost—yeas 55, nays 77. The vote then came on the first resolution of the majority of the committee, that Hon. James Brooks is not entitled to a seat in this House, from the eighth district of New York. This was agreed to—yeas 84, nays 45.

Mr. Brooks having been declared not entitled to his seat, the question recurred on the adoption of the resolution that William E. Dodge was entitled to the seat, and it was agreed to—yeas 72, nays 52—some twenty republicans voting in the negative.

Mr. Dodge was conducted to the clerk's desk and took the oath of office and his seat. The House then adjourned, at 5.30 P. M.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

"To show the very age and body of the Times."

The largest auction sale of dry goods this season took place in Philadelphia on Wednesday. There was a large attendance—dealers being present from New Orleans, Mobile, Savannah and Charleston. Boston, Baltimore and New York were also largely represented.

The catalogue consisted of 1,800 packages, 1,600 of which were domestic goods. The foreign goods were of inferior quality and brought low prices, while the domestic goods sold for less than was expected.

Several large fires occurred in New York yesterday. The Clermont House, was almost entirely destroyed. The buildings on the corner of Broadway and Barclay streets were also destroyed. The total loss by this fire was about $200,000. The fire is supposed to have been accidental. A third fire occurred between Canal and Liverpool streets, and a fourth at the Tremont House, on Broadway. The losses on Fulton and Barclay and other streets amounted to nearly $900,000. Several lives are reported to have been lost.

B. C. Truman, correspondent of the New York Times, to-fied at length yesterday before the reconstruction committee, in regard to the feeling of the people in Texas, Louisiana and Florida. Mr. Truman has just terminated an extended trip of seven months through the South, and has enjoyed unlimited facilities for observing the status of the people. It is understood that his testimony was favorable to the Southern people and to the freedmen.

It appears by late advices from Mexico that the rumor is confirmed that Maximilian has for some time been negotiating to secure a recognition of his throne from Iturbide's descendants, or at least to prevent their visiting Mexico, where they would naturally espouse the cause of the republic.

A letter received in Washington, from Alabama, reports fearful mortality among the negroes. They have scattered the small-pox through town and country, and are dying rapidly.

The Legislature of New Jersey adjourned at noon yesterday. The Republicans held a caucus that afternoon. Both houses adjourned with much good feeling.
